

A NEW HOSPITALITY IN HISTORIC SURROUNDINGS, SUPERBLY LOCATED

THE JACOBIHAUS INFO-SHEET

Access to the historical, eighteenth-century Jacobihaus is via a little bridge that crosses the Düssel Brook; then through the inviting Entrée or Entrance Hall to the BIBLIOTHEK with its high, glazed inbuilt bookcases. Together with the hall, this takes up some 70 sq. m and offers space for up to fifty people. With its open plan, the space is particularly suited for events on a flexible schedule, such as a reception combined with a seminar and/or a buffet. There is direct access from this room to a small, sheltered patio. The GOETHEZIMMER (Goethe Room) covers 42 sq. m and is suitable for 40 persons max. For larger gatherings the connecting door to the Library (BIBLIOTHEK) can be opened so that both rooms can be used. The Bibliothek is also the way to the GARTENZIMMER: all of 25 sq. m in area, this is the smallest room at the Malkasten. The table here will seat ten at most – ideal for concentrated talks in a smaller group. A wide flight of stairs leads to the upper storey and the 35 -sq.-m. SCHADOWZIMMER. The shining, dark furniture for a maximum of 22 guests, the crystal chandeliers and the light walls with their delicate striped wallpaper embody the typical charm of a Biedermeier interior. The JACOBIZIMMER with its fine terrazzo floor and the hand-printed scenic wallpaper dating from the nineteenth century, with motifs illustrating the 'Cupid and Psyche' myth, is 42 sq. m in area and accommodates up to 40 guests.
